

STRATEGIES TO IMPROVE TEACHER-STUDENT RELATIONSHIPS

December 6th, 9am-3pm
Costs $45
Coffee and Lunch Provided

Creating educational environments where all students have a chance to be successful has never been more important than they are during this critical time in America. In this inspiring session, Greg Wolcott, author of the best-selling book Significant 72: Unleashing the Power of Relationships in Today's Schools and one of the nation's leading experts on relationships in schools, describes the importance of creating a psychologically safe yet academically challenging learning environment where all students can thrive not only academically, but social-emotionally as well! Radically redefine the role relationships play in school!

Participant Outcomes:

As a result of participating in this training, educators will:

- Discover why student success in the classroom is based on much more than direct teacher-student interaction and is highly impacted by the level of psychological safety students feel.
- Understand how peers can be leveraged to increase all students social, emotional, and academic achievement.
- Learn strategies and techniques for developing connections with and between students that foster an environment of trust and acceptance where all learners can thrive.

Presenter: GREG WOLCOTT

Greg Wolcott is the Assistant Superintendent for Teaching and Learning in Woodridge, IL, a suburb of Chicago. An educator for over 25 years, Greg is passionate about developing opportunities for all students to succeed.

Greg draws upon research from the fields of education, social psychology, positive psychology, and neuroscience to provide interactive professional development opportunities to schools across North America.

@JolietPDA

@AllianceJoliet

Professional Development Alliance
2705 McDonough St., Joliet

Questions?
Call 815-744-8334